Colorado Lottery Reopens Claims Offices in Denver, Fort Collins and Grand Junction

Pueblo, Colo. – Colorado Lottery announced today that it has reopened its claims offices in Fort Collins and Grand Junction and will reopen the Denver claims office on Sept. 21 after being closed to the public since mid-March. The Pueblo office has remained open for players seeking to claim higher level prizes by appointment-only via its drive-thru claims window, but now all claims offices are taking appointments for in-person claims of prizes valued at $600 or more.

Winners can call the Lottery offices at 1-800-999-2959 to make appointments. Although claims offices are reopening, the Lottery still encourages winners to claim prizes by mail. As always, winners of $599 or less can claim their prizes in-person at any Lottery retailer.

“As more and more state offices safely reopen to the public, we are confident about opening our claims offices with the rigorous safety measures we have put in place,” said Tom Seaver, director of the Colorado Lottery. “While we still want players to stay home as much as possible, we are thankful to be able to open all four of our claims offices to in-person transactions by appointment so that players can claim larger prizes at different locations across the state.”

Lottery offices will allow only one person in the claims lobby at a time and will process transactions while following all recommended safety measures, including requiring masks to be worn at all times, touch-free transactions with gloved staff through plastic partitions, regularly disinfecting the premises and health screening of Lottery employees and members of the public.
